

Defining Traits Of Second Child Syndrome

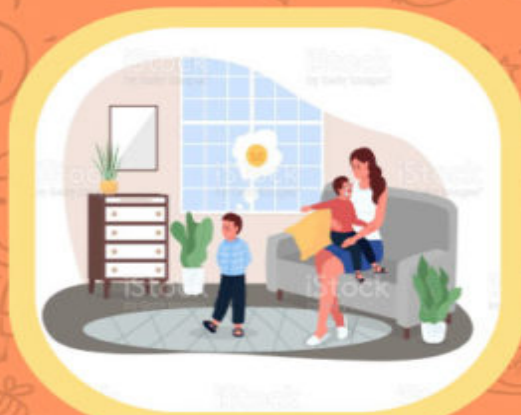

The second child may not respond to your love with the same affection because they are not happy with the amount of time you spend with them.

They may try to grab your attention by asking questions, seeking help with everything, and being mischievous.

They may be demotivated and develop emotional issues if you compare them with their siblings.

Lack of attention may cause low self-esteem and irritability that can manifest as aggression.

Sibling rivalry is normal but may be worse in this case without individual focus on each child's needs and temperament.
