What Should You Look For In A Preschool/Daycare?

The distance between the center and your home or workplace, so it's convenient to drop by and pick up.

Their operating hours should be sufficient for you and your child.

The curriculum of the preschool/daycare center to know if they ensure the overall development of your child.

The qualification of the staff or the employees, how experienced they are with children, and their requirements.

The ratio of caretaker to children to ensure your child will get proper attention.

Their emergency facilities, in case a child has an allergic reaction or suffers an injury.
