

Unique parenting method in JAPAN

In Japanese culture, parents allow their children to go to school alone, take the subway, and so on. They allow their children to be independent from an early age.

Unique parenting method in FRANCE

French parents teach their children to eat everything that adults do, and for them, there is no such thing as "kids' food".

Unique parenting method in DENMARK

Danish parents are accustomed to leaving their children unsupervised on the curb while they shop or dine.

Unique parenting method in CHINA

It is a part of an "Ancient Chinese secrets" for Chinese parents to toilet-train/potty-train their children right from the age of two.

Unique parenting method in KENYA

Kisii mothers in Kenya don't indulge them even when they're crying and also avoid making eye contact with their kids, as it is considered a form of authority.

References:

1. Global Parenting Habits That Haven't Caught On In The U.S.; National Public Radio
2. What French Parents Do That Americans Don't; National Public Radio
3. Potty-Training Infants: An "Ancient Chinese Secret"; The National Association for Child Development
4. 10 Unique Parenting Traditions From Around The World; Global Citizen Org