

Your

Baby

At

Four Months

The baby can differentiate between orange and red shades, and bright colors attract them.

They can understand expressions and eyes and recognize faces.

Babies begin to roll during this time and like to stay on their tummies for a while.

They respond to touch and textures and show curiosity toward different shapes.

They show emotions such as excitement by squealing or chuckling.

They may say mama or dada, but it may be too soon for them to use words to interact.
