

PLANNING YOUR CHILD'S

13TH

BIRTHDAY

PARTY

Consider if they have mentioned something they specifically want for their birthday and include it.

Don't invite people without asking your child since they may not be comfortable with some of their peers.

Involve them in the planning but not so much that it ruins the surprise element.

Pick a theme to make it memorable, and you may request a dress code per your child's choice.

Write everything down to not miss out on the important stuff, and it's better to stock up in advance to avoid the hustle.

Include foods and activities of your child's choice and if you also invite the parents, prepare a separate area for the adults to chat and have fun.
