

Tips To Remember While Introducing COLORS To Toddlers

Children have different understanding capabilities, and you should design activities based on your child's needs.

Introduce only one or two colors at once and continue teaching about them until your child can easily recognize them.

Do not rush with any activity related to color. Give toddlers adequate time to understand and explore.

Keep exposing toddlers to colorful objects. More practice will help them retain the concept of color better.

Introduce colors through everyday activities. This will help children understand the concept faster.

Introduce contrasting colors at the beginning, such as red and yellow or green and blue. If you introduce colors of the same family, such as red and orange, toddlers might get confused.
