

REMEMBER THESE WHILE HANDLING YOUR CHILD'S REBELLION

Once you decide on your strategy or punishment, explain it to them before implementing it and have them repeat it after you.

Follow up with consequences if they don't oblige, or else they may keep repeating their mistakes since there won't be any fear of punishment.

Don't embarrass them or talk about their actions in front of other parents or parents of their friends.

Try not to go overboard with the punishments since disciplining them more than required may make them more stubborn.

Besides fixing their bad behavior, don't forget to reward them for good behavior as encouragement.
